What China May Do

It was suggested recently that the human brain, at hand when Chinese history and politics and even Chinese rites and ceremonies may have the deepest interest for the West—much leading to the thought that an important part is reserved to them in the future history of Asia. With laws, usages, and forms of government which have grown apart without any influences from without, or from races infusing elements common to all the other groups of mankind they are the heirs not only of an old civilization—older than any now surviving—but one especially their own. Possessed of a literature which has borrowed nothing from the genius or research of the sheltered other lands a language unique in its symbols, its structure and its affinities, and a people more numerous than those and the sway of any other power, remarkable for the industry the Chinese Empire forms at this day the greatest fact of extent of dominions and number of population before taking together even swayed by a single power in any age or any part of the world. It produces within its own borders everything necessary for the comfort support and delight of its inhabitants and comprises within its limits every variety of soil and climate while beneath its surface in coal and iron stone, the primary elements of its own wealth and power. Has watered by large rivers which serve not only to irrigate and drain it but by means of them size and the course of their tributaries also afford unusual facilities for intercommunication. Thus Williams in his Middle Kingdom declares the people and the country and those who best know both, will be the most ready to admit the accuracy of the description. Such an Empire, after endurance more than 3,000 years with a people bound together by communities of race, language and religion may play an important part in the history of the future. Holding in undisputed possession the larger share of the heritage of Genghis Khan with at least 360,000,000 of subjects and among them most of those warlike and pastoral tribes whose ancestors crossed the Danube over six centuries ago until practically unlimited resources in men and means if they only know how to bring them into play—they cannot be safely despised. Nor are they likely to view the Central Asian or any other Eastern questions in which Western powers are occupied themselves a little calm. What an Emperor of China may think or do in the silence and night as we do. Perhaps with something of their own superciliousness and overweening conceit the powers who have any interests at stake in the East have too long assumed that China has no future and takes no heed. The life exterminating wars between the Mohammedan rebels in Yunnan and Shensi on her southern and western borders and the march of her armies even now to the frontier of Eastern Turkestan with the avowed intention of recovering it from its present de facto ruler—with as little care for the wishes or interests of either Russia or England as those countries have ever shown in their dealings with Asiatics for the will of China should teach another lesson.—Sir Keith Fraser's Lecture on the Far East.

German Beauty Unadorned

We like to believe of beauty that it would be as beautiful in the desert, for the sun and the sand and the sky, as it is in the ball-room where by one consent it is crowned "belle." A German lady understands nothing of such sickly theories. She does not even appreciate the "sweet unity" that lies in the fact of a woman coming to her husband or father's breakfast table trim, fresh and fragrant, on the contrary, she issues from her bed room in a loose wrapper carpet or felt slippers, and with what unseemly haste you call a maiden! Courtesy demands that it shall be spoken of as a morgenkleid, and in the case that the nightcap proper has been taken off and replaced by a tumbled edition we may accede to the term otherwise it has no pretension to be dignified by any other name than you have given it. With hair undressed and stuffed away in plaits or curls under the muslin top-knot in the most uncompromising of deshabilles, the lady presides over the scene of sloppy slovenliness. If you have seen her on state occasions, recognize the fairy vision of your dreams. The elaborate toilette, where great artists of hair lay piled Juno like above the brow, or rippled in sunny curls lovingly over the uncovered shoulders, the sweeping sacks the charming confections, have all disappeared vice a sluggishly unattractive and ungraceful style of apparel promoted. At first you will imagine you have stumbled upon the housekeeper who suffering from dolorous tic has arisen to a hasty performance of her morning duties and donned this surreptitious costume but (fortunately for German women) hospitality as we understand it—the hospitality of spare rooms, that is—is a thing unknown.—Fraser's Magazine.

The Emblematic Eagle

The Etruscans were the first who adopted the eagle as the symbol of royal power and bore its image as a standard at the head of their armies. From the time of Marius it was the principle emblem of the Roman Republic and the only standard of the legions. It was represented with outspread wings and was usually of silver till the time of Hadrian, who made it of gold. The double-headed eagle was in use among the Byzantine Emperors, to indicate it is said their claim to the Empire both of the East and West. It was adopted in the fourteenth century by the German Emperors, and afterward appeared on the arms of Russia. The arms of Prussia are distinguished by the black eagle, and those of Poland bore the white. The white headed eagle is the emblematic device of the United States of America, as the badge of the order of the Cincinnati and is figured on coins. Napoleon adopted the eagle for the emblem of imperial France, it was not, however represented in heraldic style, but in its natural form, with the thunder bolts of Jupiter. It was discussed under the Bourbons, but was restored by a decree of Louis Napoleon (Jan. 1, 1852).—Appleton's American Cyclopædia.

—Small is the sum that is required to patronize a newspaper amply rewarded is its patron. I care not how humble and unpretending the gazette which he takes. It is next to impossible to fill a sheet with printed matter without putting into it something worth the subscription price. Every parent whose son is away from home at school should supply him with a newspaper. I well remember what a marked difference there was between my schoolmates who had and had not access to newspapers. Other things being equal the first were always decidedly superior to the last in debate composition and general intelligence.—Daniel Webster.

—It must be a satisfaction to any one whose eye has impinged upon any hard substance to have the result spoken of as "a contusion of the integument under the orbit accompanied by extravasation of blood, ecchymosis of the surrounding cellular tissue and abrasion of the cuticle." It was in these choice terms that a New York medical witness described an ordinary case of "black eye" in Court a few days since.

—A Cass street boy of tender years yesterday entered the house with a big pair of pincers in his hand, and when his amazing mother inquired the use he meant to make of them, he replied, "I have got a pin-dart, haven't I?" "Yes." "Well, if I shoot it into the baby we can draw it out with these pincers and not have to call the doctor," he continued, wearing a smile of victory.

Where to Go.—If you wish to hear superior music, and indulge in a glass of beer go to the Teutonia Hall, 473 Eighth street. There is no better place in town. All kinds of wines, liquors and cigars. Beer, 5 cents. An elegant $4,000 orchestrion has just been put in.

☞ The circulation of the TRIBUNE is double that of any paper published in Alameda county.

CALVIN B. MACDONALD, the well-known journalist, has returned to Oakland after an absence of more than a year. Mac has been laboring for the reformation of the "Web-foot" inhabitants of Oregon most of the time since leaving this city, with indifferent success.

THE Valley Independent has changed hands and hands, and now appears as the Sacred Daily Times. The new publishers are Messrs. A. B. Gibson and George Rae. Mr. J. Linthicum, publisher of the Independent, retires from the journalistic field.

THE well-known commission house of Chas. Clayton & Co., of San Francisco, suspended yesterday afternoon. The paid liabilities as far as made known are given elsewhere. This is one of the oldest and widest known commission firms in San Francisco. Their misfortunes will be regretted by every one who has ever had transactions with the house. It is given out that the suspension is but temporary, and it is to be hoped that such is the case.

AND now President Grant has been and gone and made a speech—a regular 4th of July speech. As is always the habit of the President when he speaks he says something. He doesn't deal in a dress-parade of rhetoric, but marshals battalions of plain, invincible facts, and irresistible, progressive ideas. His speech at Des Moines—or so much of it as the Associated Monopoly are pleased to dole out to the people of California—has the true ring. The howl about Cæsarism will now be renewed with increased vigor, by the small dogs of the press.

THE TRIBUNE is constantly receiving complimentary and encouraging expressions of opinion from citizens of Oakland in regard to the conduct of the paper. The chief aim of the TRIBUNE is to supply the latest, fullest and most correct account of all matters of local interest. The intention is to make it essentially a local journal, and to this end everything else is subordinated. The most casual reader must have observed that in respect to its local features, at least, the TRIBUNE has been far ahead of any of its contemporaries, both in regard to the quantity and quality of matter furnished. And we have satisfactory assurances that our efforts are fully appreciated by a discriminating public.

[illegible] plant has been set out down about Bakersfield and is said to do well in rich, moist soil, but water is other. It produces a fine fiber, and is [illegible] waved with silk which it resembles. It is spoken of as a profitable product [illegible] Los Angeles.

THIS plant has been grown in Alameda county for several years on a small scale. If we are not mistaken, it was introduced into the State by a resident of Haywood, Mr. John Finch. Several persons among whom is Wm. Meek of San Lorenzo, have cultivated the ramie successfully. For some time the general cultivation of the plant was prevented because of lack of proper machinery to separate the fiber from the woody portion of the bulk, but the inventive genius of man has overcome the difficulty, and a machine has been invented which is said to perform the work satisfactorily in every respect. If this be true, there is nothing to prevent the ramie from becoming one of the staple products of the State.

CLERICAL OSCULATION.

Mr. Shearman of counsel for Henry Ward Beecher has been creating a sensation by saying in substance that it is a custom among American clergymen, generally, to kiss the sisters of their congregation. This assertion has been stoutly denied by several newspaper editors and writers, the very persons who are likely to know the least about the matter. These newspaper sharps have acquired such a habit of jumping, every proposition that is advanced by anybody outside of the scribbling fraternity, that the most sacred truths are as apt to be assailed as the most flagitious falsehoods. How can the press gang know for certain what is going on among the church members? They never mix with them to any great extent. Stuck off in some obscure, dark and dismal den through whose forbidding portals nothing has ever entered that would awaken the tender passion, what can they ever find out about kissing anyhow? The poor fellows doubtless imagine that their clerical friends are as secluded as themselves or that because they are never assailed by a pretty mouth, therefore the divine art of kissing has been forgotten. Now it is somewhat remarkable that there has been no mass meeting, no convention, no general uprising of clergymen to authoritatively deny the soft impeachment of the learned counsel. On the contrary, there has been a silence that would seem to imply consent. It is barely possible, though, that consciousness that the aspersion does not have a personal application may have induced many to remain quiet. Only wounded birds, as a general thing, flutter. And, then again, the Press was so ready to take up the cudgel in their defense, that it has been unnecessary perhaps for the clergy to refute the slander. We are not prepared to say that it is not a custom with ministers to kiss the ladies of their congregations. It is certainly their duty to salute every bride which they rescue from the unpleasant slough of maidenhood, and we have been informed that kissing, like drinking, is an insidious habit which grows upon one by continual tasting. Hence, we see the temptation which assails the most virtuous and holy minister at all times in this regard. They are but human, and the human is the only animal so far as heard from that can appreciate the bliss of the impassioned kiss. There are other very important witnesses in the matter under discussion, who have not been heard and who might possibly settle the controversy pro or con—the ladies. But, as a legal proposition, there is nothing to compel a person to convict himself or herself. Whatever the custom may be, we nevertheless insist that newspaper men have no right to enter into the discussion of a subject so foreign to their line of duty. Let those interested settle the dispute.

ELOCUTION.—Wm. N. Van Demark Teacher of Elocution in all its branches—special attention to stage and lyceum aspirants. Room No. 16, Somerset House, 468 Twelfth street, Oakland.

POSTOFFICE SAVINGS BANKS.

The English Government has a novel system of savings banks which has been in successful operation for some time. They are known as postoffice savings banks, and one of them is connected with nearly every postoffice in England. The manner in which they are conducted is thus described: The Government guarantees the safety of the deposits, and the payment of the interest upon them. A person wishing to make a deposit must present a written statement of his name, address and occupation, and sign a declaration that he has no interest, except as a trustee, in any deposits in any other savings bank. Deposits must not be less than one shilling (25 cents), and must consist of even shillings. No person can deposit more than £30 in any year, or more than £150 in all. Interest of 2½ per cent. is paid on all sums of a pound and is compounded at the close of each calendar year. When the accumulated interest or any deposit of £150 makes the whole amount to the credit of an individual £200, interest ceases, but begins again as soon as any part of the sum is withdrawn. Depositors receive receipts directly from the general office at London, and once a year, on the anniversary of the day when the first deposit was made, the book given each depositor must be furnished to this office to be posted up. There is no charge for postage on the books or on any letters which the depositors may need to send to the authorities in relation to their accounts. Deposits are re-payable on demand, and can be transferred to or from ordinary savings banks by certificates. The officers of the service are forbidden to reveal the name of any depositor or the amount standing to his credit. Minors and married women can open accounts in their own names. These are the chief features of the plan. The object is to provide a place of deposit for the small earnings of the poor, without interfering with the business of the ordinary savings banks. The deposits are said to amount to some twenty millions of of pounds. By careful management the difference between the interest guaranteed to the depositor and the interest received on investments has more than defrayed the expenses of the banks. The purchase of the telegraphs of the country by the Government, was made with these funds. It is not improbable that it may be deemed advisable to organize like institutions in connection with the postoffices of this country. Our postal department has already many banking features, but there scarcely appears, as yet, to be a demand for the system above described, although it is beyond question a practicable and beneficial one. In large cities such banks would cultivate thrift and economy among a large class of people who are naturally inclined to waste even the small earnings which they receive. But at present, our population, as compared with England, is so scattered that the ordinary banks furnish adequate facilities and sufficient inducements for all who are likely to become depositors.

THE Republican State Convention of Massachusetts, which met at Worcester yesterday, was presided over by Vice President Henry Wilson. On taking the chair, he made a political reform and hard-money speech, and referred to the national finances as follows:

> In the stress of war, when creditors and armies were unpaid, the Government issued its promises to pay, and made them legal tenders. When that enactment was made the Government in good faith intended that these notes should be redeemed in gold or in interest-bearing bonds; but ten years have passed and these promises to pay still remain unfulfilled. Greenbacks have indeed largely appreciated, and we are justly proud of the credit of the nation in the money markets of the world; but we do not, and cannot as Americans, take pride in the singular fact that a step aside from an unknown bank in one of the British Provinces can be sold in State street for a premium of more than 12 per cent. over one of our legal tender notes, with all the wealth of forty millions of people behind it. The plighted faith of the nation, the honor of the Government, the enduring interests of the people, of the rich and of the poor, of capital and labor, all demand that the Government, by wise and prudent legislation and administration, should, at the earliest practicable period, make its notes equal to and convertible into gold.

Three candidates for Governor were placed in nomination, viz: Adams, Loring and Rice. On the third ballot the latter received a majority of the votes and was declared the nominee of the party. The remainder of the ticket is composed of the following gentlemen: Horatio F. Knight was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor by acclamation. For Treasurer, Charles Endicott. For Auditor, Julius L. Clark. For Attorney-General, Charles R. Train. For Secretary of State, H. B. Pierce. The ticket is a strong one and is almost certain to be successful in November.

The color is ornamental for roofs; resembling a highly polished slate. It can be placed on either tin or shingles already painted, and which are old, saving both the roof and rendering the same impervious to fire and water. In offering this PAINT to the public, we supply a need which has long been felt. Almost without exception shingled roofs have been left without any protection from the scorching sun and soaking storms, shrinking and swelling, and speedily going to ruin and decay, causing leaky roofs and expensive repairs. THE COMMITTEE.

Notice.

CONSUMERS OF WATER FOR IRRIGATION purposes are hereby notified that the supply of water is so rapidly diminishing, that it will be absolutely necessary to limit the use of water on lawns and gardens to the least amount necessary to keep them alive during the remainder of the season. The water has been used for such purposes too freely heretofore, in spite of the earnest remonstrances of officers of the Company. All consumers will admit that they have scarcely been subjected in their appropriations of the supply up to this time. It is now necessary to limit the use of water for irrigation purposes to twice a week, and in order that there may be a good supply, or head, to divide the city into districts, and give to each district certain days for irrigation. The following plan has been adopted, and it is hoped that consumers will aid the Company in carrying out the necessary measures:

First District—All that part of the city north of Fourteenth street and east of Market street, and all of East Oakland, irrigate on Monday and Thursday.

Second District—All that part of the city south of Fourteenth street and east of Market street, on Tuesday and Friday.

Third District—All west of Market street, Wednesday and Saturday.

It is thought that the increased force of the water secured by this plan will render its use far more satisfactory and effective.

Consumers are cautioned against the use of water at night, and are particularly requested to keep all their water fixtures in good order.

Respectfully,

C. BRIEN, Cashier

A PATRIARCHAL PAIR.

Four Score and Ten and Four Score and Eight—The History of General Martin Shuey and His Wife, Mary—A Remarkable Record.

There reside in this city, or rather, its eastern suburb, Fruit Vale, a remarkable pair; remarkable not only for their venerable ages, but also their eventful lives and Christian faith and fortitude. We mean Martin Shuey and his wife Mary. The former, on the 28th instant, reached his ninetieth birthday, and the latter, should she live so long, will celebrate her eighty-eighth anniversary on the 22d day of February, 1876. Both are enjoying good health for people so greatly advanced in years, and it is not improbable they may yet add several laurels of time to those already registered by them. Of the many souls born into this world it is allotted to but very few to walk the earth so long, and observe the developments and changes of three successive generations! They have by many days outlived the prescribed "three score and ten" and been joined in the bonds of wedlock for

SIXTY-SEVEN YEARS.

In this sketch we shall show how they have traveled the rough road of life together, and maintained an unsevered alliance through all the vicissitudes of a pioneer life—through war and want and many a wild danger, amid unbroken solitudes and savage men. Their lives show that their conjugal faith was strong, and their love for each other unbounded. They crossed the continent together, starting from the cradle of the Republic, halting on the way at different stages, stopping, as it were, to witness the birth of new States, and faithfully following "the Star of Empire" in its westerly course, until it finally set on the placid Pacific's golden shores.

GENERAL MARTIN SHUEY

Was born in Lebanon county, Pennsylvania, September 28th, 1785, and therefore completed his ninetieth year on Tuesday last. He is of French origin. His grandfather emigrated from the city of Lyons in the year 1715, to Pennsylvania, where his father Louis Shuey, purchased a warrant for a tract of land, containing over a thousand acres, situated on the banks of the Sodario, eighty miles west of Philadelphia, for two shillings and sixpence! This he subsequently divided up and gave to six sons and two daughters—the subject of this sketch coming in for his share with the rest.

When eighteen years old his father, attracted like so many others, since his day, towards the promising west, removed to Ohio, then a territory, taking his family with him. This was in 1805. Cincinnati, now one of the great cities of the Union, consisted at that time, according to his statement, of thirty-five log and frame huts, with only one two-story house. Ohio was then a wilderness, having but a few scattered settlements here and there. The family chose a farm five miles from Franklin, for a home.

THE COMMENCEMENT OF HIS MILITARY CAREER.

Protection against the raids of the savages became at once a necessity of the new settlers, and it was determined to form a rifle company. This event took place in the year 1805, and Mr. Shuey, who was an intelligent as well as an active, able man, was at once chosen Lieutenant of the new organization. In 1810, he was elected Captain of his company, and was placed in command of the Eighth Military District of Ohio. In this capacity he served throughout the war of 1812, when hostilities broke on, between the United States and Great Britain, the principal scenes of military operations having been the great lakes of North America and their borders. In 1815, after the war, in which Captain Shuey served with distinction, was over, he was elected Major of the battalion to which his company belonged, and in 1816 was elected Colonel of his regiment. In 1818 he received further promotion and was made a Brigadier-General. The military district in which he commanded embraced Forts Brown, Winchester, Laramie, St. Mary's, Amanda and Jennings. Fort Winchester was an out-post, and there he was stationed for most of the time. In 1826 he resigned his military position, having become a married man in the meantime with a family growing up around him, and removed from Ohio.

IN THE "NEW TERRITORY."

In '820 General Shuey removed with his wife and family into the present State of Indiana, which was then known as the "New Territory." The West still wooed him on and he followed at her beck. He settled in Shelby county, and there cultivated a farm for nine years and attended to the education of his children.

STILL WESTWARD.

In 1829 he left Indiana and removed to Illinois, then a territory. He settled in Adams county. The State was but very thinly settled. The present important city of Quincy, on the Mississippi river, then consisted of but a few small log cabins and one frame kitchen. The solitude of the vast rolling prairies was only broken by the war whoops of the Indians—the Potawatamies and Winnabagoes—and the cries of the chase. For twenty years he tarried in the new State, aiding in the development of what has since become one of the foremost centers of population and wealth in the Union. The Western fever, however, was still upon him, and California, with her tales of teeming wealth—of her golden ore, her productive soil and delightful climate—was destined to be his future home, and the ultimate resting place of himself and his numerous descendants. In 1853 he crossed the plains, scaled the high Sierras, and settled in Brooklyn with his wife, sons and daughters, where they have since remained.

MRS. MARY M. SHUEY,

The wife of the old soldier, is as remarkable a woman as her husband is a man. She was born February 22, 1788, near Philadelphia. Her maiden name was Schupert, and she is of German descent. Her grandfather and grandmother emigrated from their home on the banks of the Rhine, in the year 1723. The former died in Philadelphia at the advanced age of 100 years. Her father and mother lived on the old ancestral homestead during the revolutionary war, and died when both had attained the venerable age of 80 years. In 1808, while serving his country, she was married to General Shuey. She faithfully adhered to him during all his trials, troubles and changes, participating in his adversity, and sharing his prosperity, and suffered many dangers and privations during his absences from her in the performance of his military duties. When she married him he was following mercantile pursuits near the present site of Germantown. In the Fall of 1812, her husband left for the seat of war in Ohio, as captain of the company which he had been drilling four four or five years previous, leaving her with the care of a household and three children. She necessarily indured a great many privations and hardships, besides great anxiety of mind. The war extended to her neighborhood, and at times the shouts of conflict and roar of cannon were distinctly heard by her. Foraging parties would even enter her house, and the savages prowled around and threatened to massacre herself and three helpless children; but she fortunately escaped every danger, as she believed, on account of her infinite trust in an Overruling Providence. She believed her preservation through those troublous times to have been miraculous, and at the end of the war she had the consolation of seeing her husband restored to her in good health and without a wound. She was always possessed of a deep religious faith. In 1809, she joined a Luthern church in Ohio, of which her brother-in-law was pastor, but subsequently, in Indiana, becoming convinced of the invalidity of baptism by sprinkling, she became convinced that the belief of her husband, who was a member of the Baptist church, was the correct one, and she accordingly became a convert to that church in Indiana, and of which both are devoted members to this day, and have filled important positions in the religious body to which they belong. As they lived and believed themselves, so have they brought up and educated their children. They joined the Oakland Baptist Church the first Sunday after their arrival in California, in October, 1850, and when in 1860 a new church was organized in Brooklyn, General Shuey was chosen one of its deacons. Their selection of California as a future home was the cause of a considerable acquisition to the population of our State.

THEIR PROGENY

Alone, is very respectable in numbers. They are the parents of eleven children, most of whom survive and reside in this State. They have twenty-nine grandchildren and forty great grand-children, nearly all residing in this State. They have been residing for the past two years in Fruit Vale with their son John, who died on the 31st day of July last, at the age of 64 years, of consumption. They previously resided with their daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Hollip, in Brooklyn.

THEIR PRESENT CONDITION

General Shuey, now in his ninety-first year, and successively soldier, merchant and farmer—a resident of five States, and a pioneer of three of them—is in the full possession of all his faculties. His sight is good and memory clear, and he can narrate events in his eventful life with animation and exactness. He is a great reader, and devours the contents of books with avidity, and discerns their contents consecutively and clearly. He is not able to walk out, being rather feeble in his limbs. When he came to California at seventy-five years of age, he was erect and graceful of figure. The old lady is not so well off. On account of an accident, she has lost the use of her limbs, but still reads and does needle-work. Their three generations of children are much devoted to them, and when they die they will undoubtedly have many mourners and large funerals. A more remarkable old couple is difficult to find. We are proud of them.

A JUVENILE OFFENDER.

Some Substantial Sympathy Shown in His Behalf.

We yesterday made reference in our Court report to the case of the boy, F. C. Dossan, who is the son of a man who died in the city of Washington some years ago, leaving the boy to the care of a stepmother, who placed him in a Reform School in that city. Some months ago the lad was taken from that institution and apprenticed to a silversmith, who brought him to Oakland. He became homesick and stole $85 from his guardian and fled. A warrant was issued for his arrest, he was overtaken and was brought before Judge Jayne for examination on the charge of grand larceny. He acknowledged the theft, giving as his reason for stealing the money that he wanted to get back home. After being in jail about two months, he was indicted by the Grand Jury, and thus his case came before the County Court yesterday. While the lad was passing through these eventful phases of his boyhood, his stepmother wrote to an official in the Masonic Fraternity at San Francisco, asking that inquiries be made as to the whereabouts of the boy, (whose father was a Free Mason) whom she had not heard from since he was consigned to the guardianship of the silver-smith. The San Francisco police were applied to and the boy was soon reported to be in the county jail in this city. The San Francisco members of the noble brotherhood, with which the boy's father was in his lifetime connected on the other side of the continent then examined into the case, and finding the lad friendless, except themselves to shield him from a felon's fate. The ladies of the Oakland Prison Visiting Association also interested themselves in the boy's behalf and consulted with Mr. W. L. Turner, the attorney, as the best means to prevent the lad being sent to the State Prison. When the case was called yesterday, Judge Pratt and Mr. Turner each made an eloquent appeal that a plea of guilty of petit larceny might be admitted. The first-named gentleman assured the Court that prominent persons stood ready to take the boy after his term of imprisonment shall have expired and endeavor to make a useful citizen of him. The District Attorney opposed the reduction of the charge on the ground that the law required him to prosecute where the evidence of guilt was as plain as it was in this case. He held that if it was his duty to commit in this case, he would owe the same duty to all others in the jail. Judge Nye said he did not understand that it rested with the District Attorney, but with the Court. He had always been inclined to be lenient with boys of tender age, for it had been his experience that many lads to whom clemency was shown turned out to be good citizens, some of them prominent citizens. If the boy wished to put in a plea of guilty of petit larceny, the Court would accept it. Thus the boy has another opportunity for reform. Sentence will be imposed to-morrow.

ANOTHER SUSPENSION.

A Heavy Grain, Produce and Commission House has to Succumb.

On Tuesday afternoon the creditors of the firm of Chas. Clayton & Co., grain and produce commission merchants, of San Francisco, were notified that the firm would be obliged to suspend payment. This announcement was not known outside of the parties interested until yesterday morning. The news of the suspension was received on 'Change with much unfeigned regret.

The liabilities of the firm are known to be about $20,000. A statement of the assets will be made to-day at a meeting of creditors, which will be held at the office of Wm. T. Coleman & Co.

The condition of business, which has culminated in this, the first, business failure since the closing of the doors of the Bank of California, will be better understood after a brief history of the firm.

Hon. Chas. Clayton was one of the early pioneers, who came across the plains by way of Oregon to this coast, plodding his weary way through the adventures of the early days of California in June, 1850, he established the house of Patch & Clayton in this city, on Front street, between Clay and Washington, in the same block where the present firm is to be found. The business connected has been, from that early day until the present time, that of a grain and produce commission house. In 1870 the firm style was Chas. Clayton & Co., which has been preserved ever since. In June, 1875, Joseph W. Jordan became the junior partner in the firm. The Santa Clara Bonanza hills have been owned by and operated in connection with this firm. The business of such a venerable house is twofold. First—that of making advances of money, seed and provision to farmers on which interest is charged. Second—That of selling grain and produce on commission.

Such a business has been done for twenty-two years by the firm which has now suspended. The causes which led to the suspension were quite natural, though unfortunate. When Mr. Clayton returned from Congress last spring, he found that he had been credited with annual profits amounting to about $17,000, and the books of the firm indicated that the business was worth $150,000 over its liabilities. But a large number of the customers of the house this year were unfortunate and had short crops. They have therefore been unable to pay their accounts for advances made and sacks furnished. The firm has an indebtedness to importing houses of $115,000, for sacks and bagging material, which are purchased on four months' time. These accounts becoming due on Monday, and it being impossible to obtain aid from the banks, and there being no hopes of collecting sufficient money from farmers until another year's crops come in, notice was at once sent to the creditors that payment must be suspended.

Prior to this, however, every effort to bridge over the difficulty had been made without success. The failure of the Bank of California, which had heretofore afforded facilities to the firm, cut off aid in that quarter. The firm had an account with the bank, to which it is indebted for about $20,000. On the day of the failure a deposit of $20,000 was made. Other accounts swell the liabilities to about $200,000.

The creditors are in session to-day at the office of Wm. T. Coleman & Co. If they force the firm into bankruptcy, the assets are of such a character that their value will greatly shrink probably more than one-half. If the firm could have an extension of time, and liberal terms for settlement it may go on with its business, and if or next year's crops the receipts from farmers may settle all claims. Under the circumstances, there is no doubt but that every reasonable assistance will be afforded. It is unfortunate, but most worthy and respectable house.

It is gratifying to know that none of the farmers who have been dealing with the firm have lost anything by the failure. Large sums of them have been in the habit of depositing with the firm, but during the panic they have all drawn out their funds and all accounts for grain sold prior to have been paid. The losses fall on wealthy men who are able to stand it. The most heartfelt sympathy is expressed in business circles, and also in the city, for Mr. Clayton. What he will, if given up his business.

HOME INDUSTRY.

How the Merchants and Producers Have a Community of Interests.

Probably in no country in all the world have the merchants and producers been so closely allied as in California. The farmer has been assisted in the work of developing the resources of the country by the merchants, who have been dependent upon the success of the farmer for the return of the bread which they have cast upon the waters. In the course of the development of this State's agricultural resources, great obstacles have been met and surmounted only by the persistence of the courageous policy adopted by our people, which, like our banking policy, has been the product of our necessities and energies. Farming has not only been the occupation of the few accustomed to it by previous life, but it has been a legitimate speculation for the investment of capital. Many men have come to this coast with nothing but their muscle and a will to work. They have secured by lease, or otherwise, tracts of farming land. Being without the necessary means to cultivate their farms, they have applied to produce commission merchants for aid. These merchants have advanced seed, farming implements, money to pay for harvesting, and provisions for the farmers, taking as security the prospective crops. In seasons of prosperity this business has netted large profits to the merchants; but when the farmers have failures in their crops they have nothing to pay.

In such a case it is necessary for the merchants to advance money, seed, etc., again to carry the farmer on another year. One of the great features of the Bank of California has been its disposition, through the management of Wm. C. Ralston, to lend aid to the merchants to help them carry the farmers through seasons of short crops. Ralston was the patron of home industry, and in nothing else was he more valuable to the State than in his aid thus extended to the producers of the country. Of course it can be readily seen that commission merchants, without such aid, would often be obliged to sacrifice what they had already advanced, and also the farmers would be cast adrift at the end of unsuccessful seasons. As the State becomes developed these troubles are less pressing and the farmers are more independent. As a whole, there is a greater community of interests in this than in any other section of the Union.

VICKSBURG (Miss.), September 29.—A special from Jackson, Mississippi to the Herald says: "About 1,000 breech-loading rifles, with a full supply of cartridges and all the equipments for 1,000 men have been received here for the State, consigned to Mayor Allyn commanding the United States troops. It is understood that these arms and munitions are the full quota to which the State is entitled from the United States, and they are to be used in arming the militia. If the militia fail in any part of their duty in preserving order, it is said that Grant has assured Governor Ames he will send the whole army of the United States if necessary. There can be no doubt that Grant has given this assurance.

NEW YORK, September 28.—Superintendent George S. Bangs of the Postal Service, this afternoon addressed the members of the Board of Trade on the matter of running a fast evening mail train from this city to the West. He said it was impracticable and could not be advantageous; that the morning train served all purposes. A communication was received from Senator Schurz, declaring his inability, from pressure of business, to address the Board on the subject of finance on either the 11th, 12th or 13th of next month. The Board telegraphed him in reply to to name any day in October for the delivery of his address.

GRANT SPEAKS.

Soldiers' Reunion at Des Moines—Synopsis of Grant's Speech.

At the Soldiers' Reunion at Des Moines yesterday, President Grant said he had concluded to disappoint those who had called upon him in expectation of a short speech, as he jotted down many things which he wished to say. He then expressed gratification in recalling the days when they had suffered together to preserve a government which they believed worth fighting and even dying for. "We will not," said he, "deny to any of those who fought against the United States any privilege under the government which we claim for ourselves; on the contrary, we welcome all such who come forward in good faith to help build up the waste places and perpetuate our institutions against enemies, as brothers in full interest with us in a common heritage. To guard against a recurrence of past days, we must begin by guarding against every enemy preventing the prosperity of our free republican institutions. I do not bring into this assemblage politics, certainly not party or sectional politics; but it is a fair subject for the soldiers in their deliberation to consider what may be necessary to secure the prize for which they battled." The President urged cultivation of intelligence among the people in regard to political matters, and said, "If we are to have another contest in the near future of our national existence, I predict the dividing line will not be Mason & Dixon's, but between patriotism and intelligence on the one side, and superstition, ambition and ignorance on the other. In this centennial year the work of strengthening the foundation of the structure begun by our forefathers one hundred years ago, at Lexington, should be begun. Let us all labor for more security of free thought, free speech, a free press, and pure morals, unfettered religious sentiments, and equal rights and privileges of all men, irrespective of nationality, color, or religion. Encourage free schools, and resolve that not one dollar appropriated to them shall be applied to the support of any sectarian school. Resolve that neither State nor Nation shall support institutions save those where every child in the land may get a common school education, unmixed with atheist, pagan, or sectarian teachings. Leave the matter of religion to the family, and keep Church and State forever separate. With these safeguards, I believe the battles which created the Army of Tennessee will not have been fought in vain."

The President's speech was greeted with applause, repeated again and again.

General Sherman closed the speaking for the night with a harmonious and short speech, in which he said he wished the speeches made here to-night could be printed in full and scattered broadcast through the South, to show the people there how the ex-soldiers of the North felt toward them.

—General Spinner's letter accepting the Republican nomination for Controller of New York is a graceful piece of writing. It is addressed to the gentleman who proposed his name in the Convention. One paragraph reads as follows: "While I feel the liveliest sense of gratitude to you and to the other members of the Convention for the great compliment paid me by the bestowal of the nomination, I must in candor say that it is one of the saddest blows that has ever been dealt me. I resigned a higher and better place, one with the duties of which I was entirely familiar, principally because I desired and needed the rest that had for so many long years been denied me. And now, after I had hired a house and made all my family arrangements to spend the Winter in Florida. I may be remanded back to confinement and hard labor for the term of two years, and this, too, in a place that I know nothing about and where I will have everything to learn."

REDUCTION IN GAS.

Important to Landlords and Gas Consumers.

SAFETY AND ECONOMY.

OFFICE OAKLAND GASLIGHT Co., February 1, 1875

IN PURSUANCE OF THE POLICY FOLLOWED by this Company since its formation, viz to use its rates as rapidly as is warranted by the growth of the city, the price of gas will be reduced on the

1st Day of March Next

—TO—

$4 25 PER 1,000 CUBIC FEET.

Considering the value of coal and labor the limit of cost of gas and the distance between the place of production and consumption

Oakland will be the most cheaply lighted city in the Union.

This price will leave no valid excuse for the use of any illuminant but Coal Gas, along the lines of the Company's mains, a large part of which have now and have been since they were laid unproductive of income.

The advantages to be reaped by the public from the above are—

1st A daily saving in the cost of one of the necessaries of life

2d A reduction in the number of destructive fires caused by the use of the volatile distillates of petroleum

3d A saving of human life by substituting stationary lights for portable lamps

4th The most convenient and safest light by night within the means of the most economical household

How we small the house, the economy will be great If insured the rate of premium will be less or if not insured, the risk of loss will be decreased

This reduction can only be profitable to the Company, by the accession of a sufficient number of new consumers to compensate for the lessening of its current receipts, and it will become the interest of all consumers of gas, to induce their neighbors to adopt this light, in order that further reductions may be made in the future

The attention of consumers is also directed to the use of gas for heating and cooking In Europe and the Eastern cities it has been adopted to a great extent, and its use is constantly extending.

It is to be hoped that this movement will be accepted in the spirit which has inspired it, and which has always characterized the Company, viz.,

That the Interests of Consumers and the Company are Identical.

The Company are constantly advised of all changes in modes of manufacture and distribution, and will at all times avail itself of any real improvements which tend to improve quality and lessen price.

The Dragoman

Few countries are more traveled than Palestine and in few are the manners and customs of the people less known We may truly say that the population of Oceanica, of the extreme East of Central Asia, of India, of Egypt and even of the Bedaween tribes beyond the Jordan are now more familiar to us than that of this little corner of the earth so often trodden by European travelers Tourists, pilgrims, and servants pour into the country but all nearly without exception for different reasons neglect to notice and to render any account of the only thing which is entirely fresh and unfinished—the manners of the present The reason of this may chiefly be found in the mode of traveling, to which the European becomes condemned in Palestine Nearly invariably he has to bend him self over to the mercy of the mountable dragoman of truchman and dependent upon his good humor of the moment he can see but what the latter thinks fit to show him Hurried from one object to another, he acquires much less positively already read in Egypt There however it matters little for most travelers dragoman upon the effect produced by the splendor and magnificence of the temples and tombs of the Pharaohs But about the ruins of the Nile is kept up a hubbub and confusion of tongues which renders it impossible to collect the slightest information from the mouths of the dragomans themselves, who are the most ignorant people who could be chosen for the purpose of supplying the information required by travelers

An Attempt to Establish a Fashion

An attempt is said to be seriously on foot to introduce leopard skin into Europe as a fashionable fur Leopard skin is not considered a handsome fur, and most of the leopards would have been left to their spots were it not for the fact that the animals would become fashionable The animals would soon have gone the way of seals and other handsome creatures unless they ought to attract the feminine eye Perhaps ladies have extended their arms in vain to protect those dumb animals from the fleeting fancy But the arm of fashion is long and the whim of a Parisian belle propels the savage leopard in the sunburned lands until the quarry bounds lamblessly and have become as safe as if they were in their native jungles and lairs Indeed it would be a pretty sight to see the handsome gentlemen walking here Unfortunately fashion has not yet set in the direction of the more dangerous and destructive of beasts except in the form of wearing tigers claws as a locket or a brooch—Will her Majesty?

—When a man provides a pew in church for his family and can get them to come is it not a little unreasonable to complain when he devotes the morning to sunfishing, that those dependent upon him may have played as well as prayed?

—If there is one thing above another that will cause a man's heart to cease pulsation it is to see a woman striding out to clothes line with a piece of wet fish in her hand and two clothes pins protruding from her mouth

Messrs Dunham & Lathrop's New Photographic Art gallery at No 117 Broadway was visited by the Tribune reporter on the 6th inst and the following graphic description of the first picture taken there is the result Mr Dunham and Mr Lathrop with an elevator which runs by steam and which will lift a load of 1,000 pounds, have fitted up their building with an elegant suite of rooms on the second floor, and have also a commodious gallery on the roof, which will be used for taking pictures when the weather is favorable The reporter was invited to the gallery on the roof, and there found Mr Dunham in the act of posing a young lady for a picture Mr Dunham was dressed in a neat business suit, and was busily engaged in arranging the lady's position, and in adjusting the camera The lady was dressed in a handsome suit of black silk, and was evidently a little nervous at the ordeal she was undergoing Mr Dunham, however, soon put her at her ease, and in a few minutes the picture was taken The reporter was then invited to the operating room, where Mr Dunham showed him the negative, which was a perfect picture, and which will be developed and printed in a few days Mr Dunham and Mr Lathrop have had a long experience in the business, and have the best facilities for doing first-class work, and we wish them success in their new location
